Henry Poole & Co

PHILIP PARKER, MD & SENIOR CUTTER, AND ALEX COOKE, CUTTER

PHILIP PARKER

Describe your style

We make what we consider to be a 'London, West End Savile Row' garment. These garments have a natural shoulder line, front drape over the chest which helps to create the waisted line for which Savile Row is famous all over the world.

What would you save from your wardrobe in a fire?

My leather blouson jacket.

What is an absolute essential in every man's wardrobe?

A good dinner suit (black tie).

Who would you most like to cut a suit for?

James Bond - he should have his clothes made in Savile Row.

Who else do you admire - high street or high style?

Paul Smith.

ALEX COOKE

Describe your style

A Henry Poole & Co suit would have a shoulder line somewhere between sloping and slanting, the chest area will have a drape which coupled with a nipped in waist, hints at an hourglass shape. However, being a bespoke suit it can be tailored to any silhouette.

What would you save from your wardrobe in a fire?

My daughter's first babygro, it says 'Daddy's Girl' on the front, everything else can be replaced.

What is an absolute essential in every man's wardrobe?

A single breasted, two-button, navy blue suit.

Who would you most like to cut a suit for?

Sacha Baron Cohen's Borat.

Who else do you admire - high street or high style?

Alexander McQueen and Junya Watanabe.

HENRY POOLE & CO.

15 SAVILE ROW, LONDON

Savile Row in London's Mayfair enjoys an unrivalled reputation the world over for its excellence of bespoke tailoring. Henry Poole and Co, the founders of Savile Row have been at the forefront of this trade for almost two hundred years.

During that time the Henry Poole order books contained such famous names as Napoleon III, King Edward VII, Prime Minister Yoshida, Charles Dickens, Sir Winston Churchill and Pierpoint Morgan.

The Company provides classic English style bespoke garments combining superb cutting with the very best fabrics from Yorkshire and Scotland. Pooles have always sought to produce clothes with both elegance and comfort and whilst mastering the art of accommodating worthwhile change, have preserved the best traditional values.

The firm has long recognised the importance of an international clientele and sends its directors and cutters on a regular basis to New York, San Francisco, Chicago, Los Angeles, Palm Beach, Atlanta, New Orleans and Austria, Belgium, Luxembourg, France, Germany and Switzerland.
